Mixed Media: New York Times, Statue of Liberty image from old election poster, copy of the Constitution, Declaration of Independence and Bill of Rights, globe of the world painted red, bobby pins

Statement: One of the many nice things about the sculpture show at JimGin Farm is the freedom for an artist to experiment with ideas. Making a piece of art primarily from news print means that it will change over the period of time the show covers. Several days after I installed this piece we had two evenings of torrential rain! When I came out to see how the piece had fared the boat was in bad shape. What I had to repair it with was a couple of bobby pins I found in my car and an "I can help register you to vote pin." since the boats are about refugees and escaping oppression I thought these were appropriate repair materials, what I had with me!

I am curious about how the piece will hold up. I like that most of it will return to nature.

Thank you for looking and for being here and for celebrating one more year of this glorious art show!
